

A Model for Program Development

Daniel L. Gossman
Kanto Gakuen University

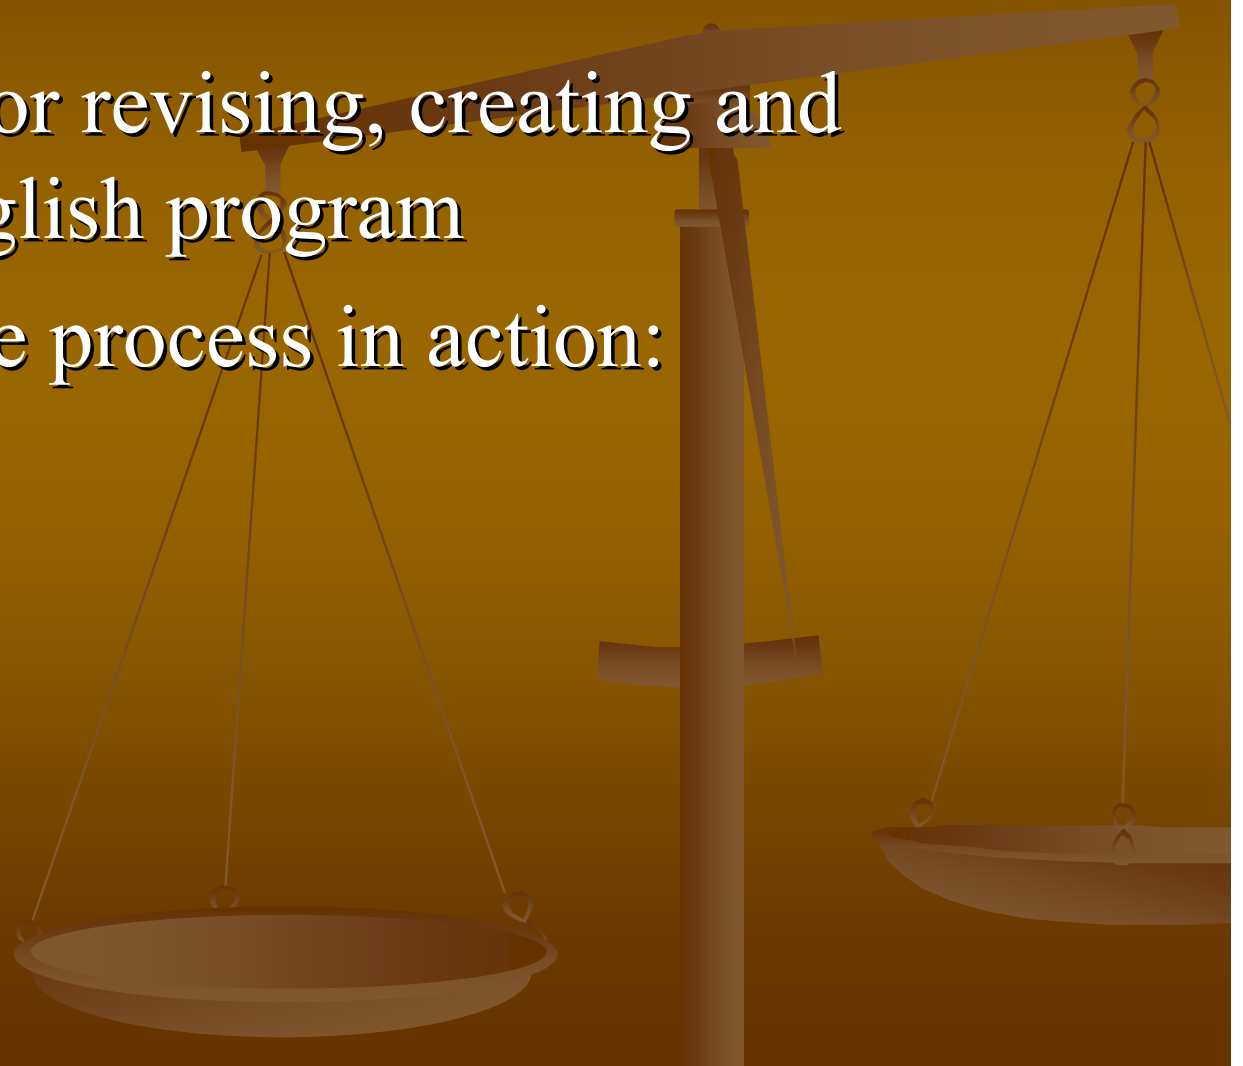

Michael Stout
Kanto International High School

AsiaTEFL Beijing, China
November 6, 2005

A Model for Program Development

- Present a process for revising, creating and maintaining an English program
- A quick view of the process in action:
 - At a high school
 - At a university

A Model for Program Development

- Four major areas of concern
 - Environment
 - Resources
 - Objectives
 - Implementation

A Model for Program Development

■ Environment

■ Global

- Requirements/Restrictions
- Impact

■ Organizational

- Goals
- Structure

■ Individual

- Relationships
- Stakeholders

A Model for Program Development

- McKinsey's Seven "S's"
 - Super-ordinate Goal
 - Strategy
 - Structure
 - Systems
 - Skills
 - Staff
 - Style

A Model for Program Development

■ Resources

■ Internal

- People
- Hard Goods
- Soft Goods

■ External

- People
- Hard Goods
- Soft Goods

A Model for Program Development

- Objectives
 - Society
 - Institution
 - Program
 - Course
 - Teacher
 - Student

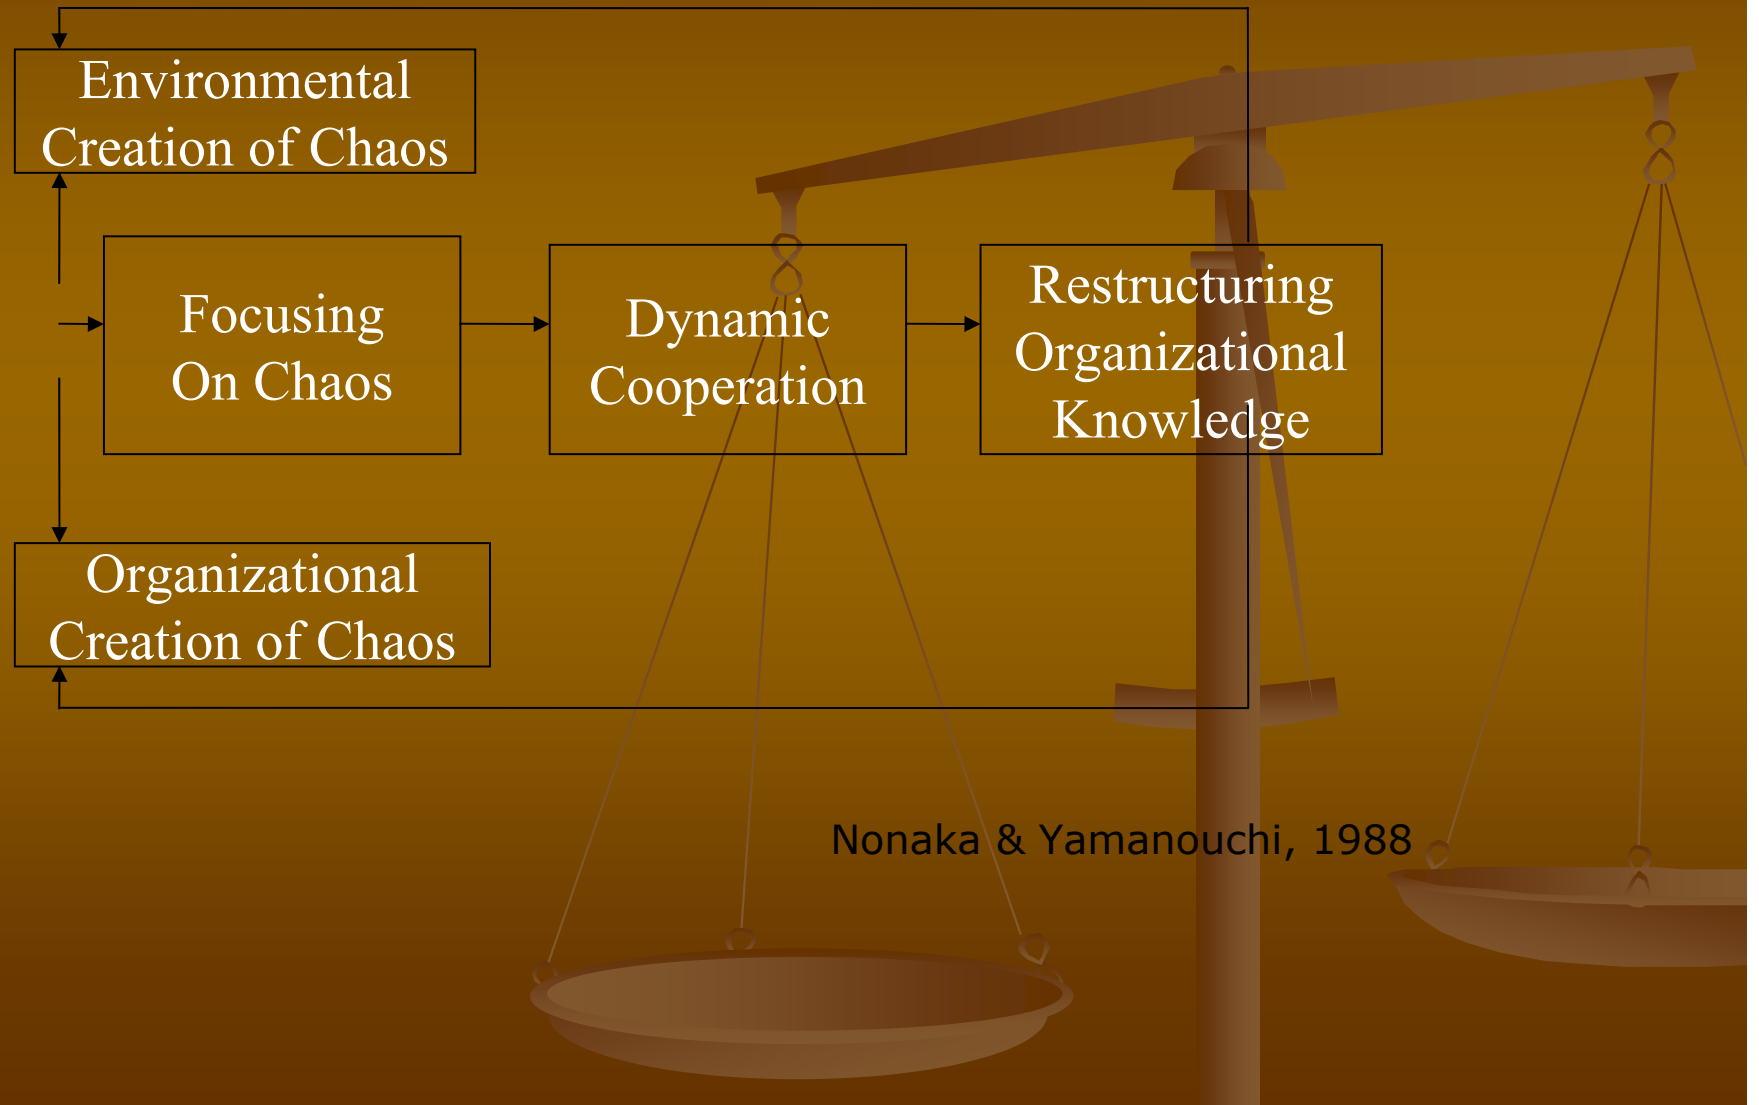

A Model for Program Development

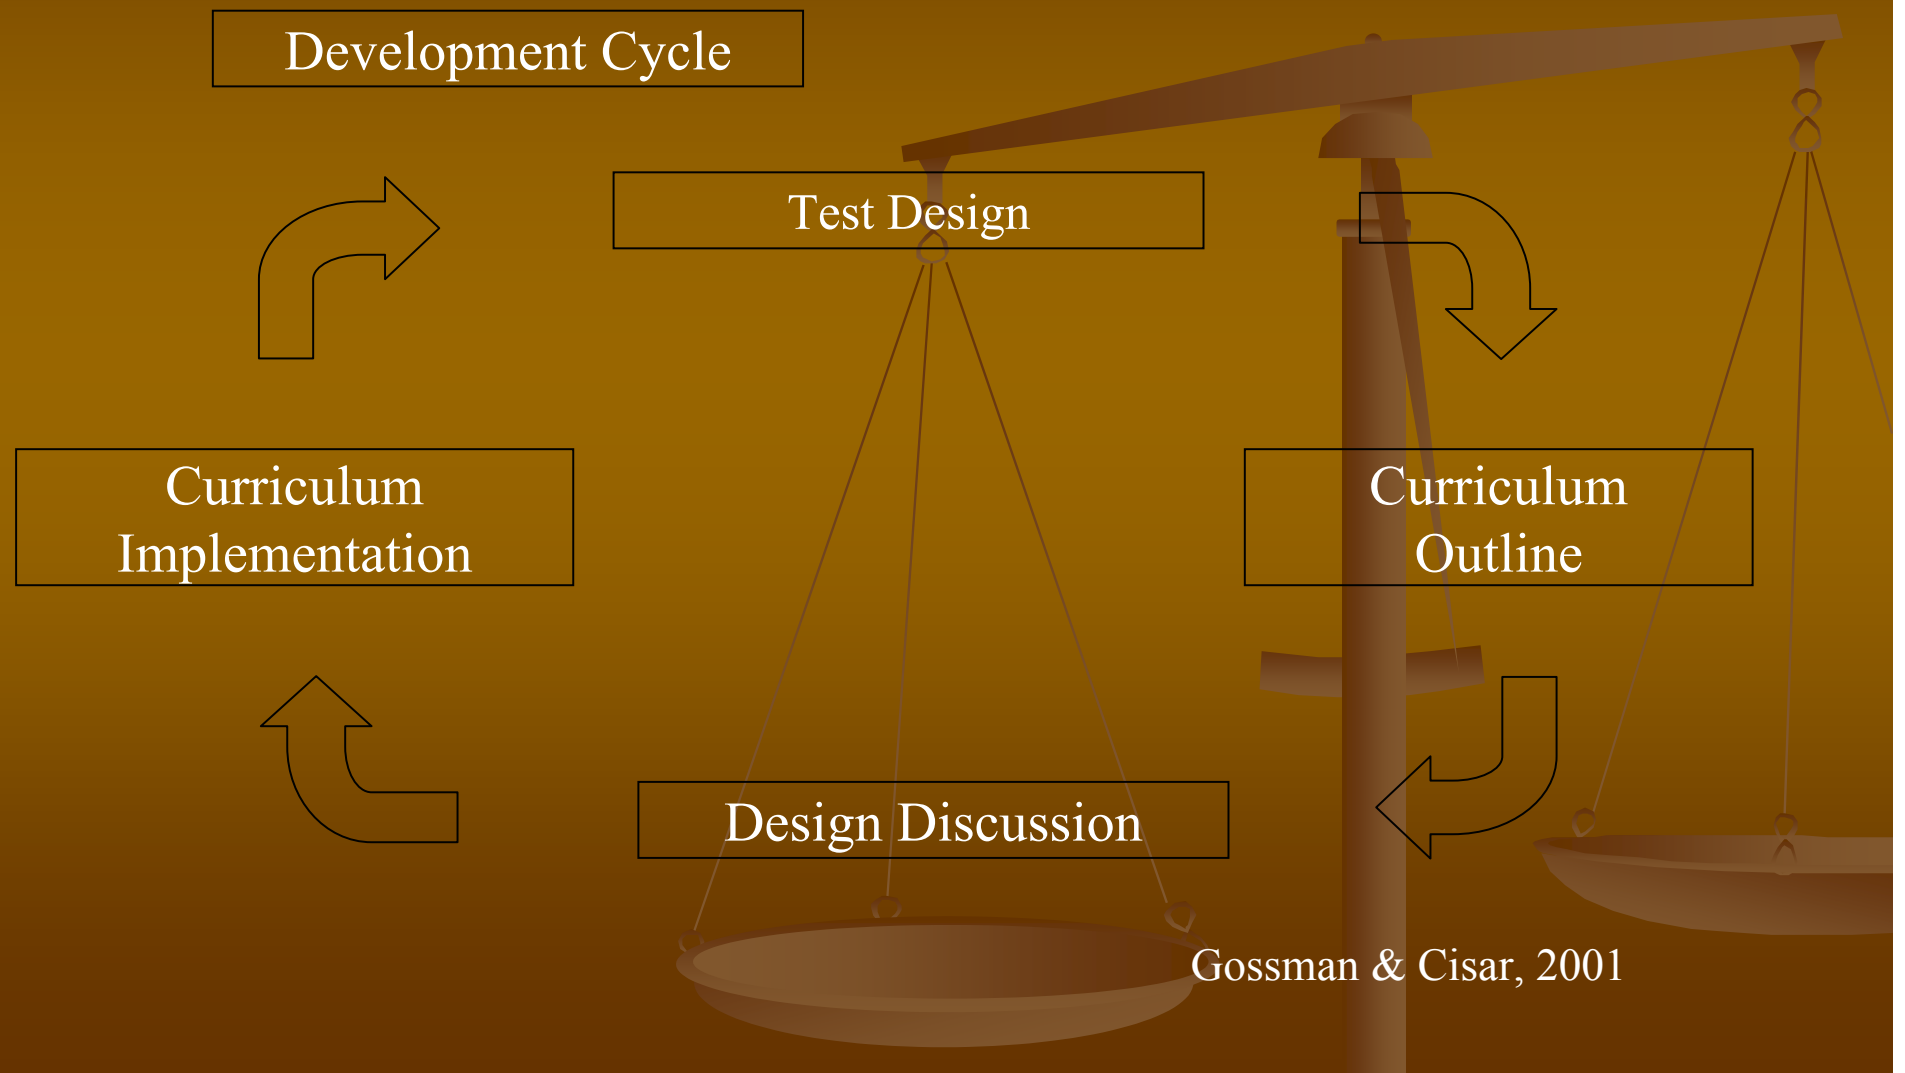

- Implementation
 - Propose
 - Prepare
 - Implement
 - Maintain

A Model for Program Development

A Model for Program Development

A Model for Program Development

■ Kanto International High School

■ Environment

■ Global

- MEXT (2002) “Developing a strategic plan to cultivate "Japanese With English Abilities"”
- Declining Enrolment

■ Organizational

- Foreign Language Education: English, Chinese, Korean, Russian
- World School: affiliation with overseas schools, study abroad

■ Individual

■ Relationships

- Japanese and Foreign teachers
- Homeroom teachers and subject teachers
- Teachers and students

A Model for Program Development

■ Kanto International High School

■ Resources

■ Internal

- Teachers: multiple methodologies, multilingual
- Students: bilingual and trilingual peer tutors
- Computers and school website

■ External

- Teachers and students at affiliated schools
- Homestay families
- World School website

A Model for Program Development

■ Kanto International High School

■ Objectives

■ Students

- preparing for the era of a global society
- Career prosperity
- University entrance

■ Teachers

- Exchange and synthesis of methodologies
- Integrated curricula
- Valid and reliable assessment tools

■ Institution

- Increase and maintain enrolment

A Model for Program Development

- Kanto International High School
 - Implementation
 - Structure
 - Organizational restructuring
 - Japanese and Foreign teacher integration
 - Curriculum
 - Super E
 - Study Abroad

A Model for Program Development

- Four major areas of concern
 - Environment
 - Resources
 - Objectives
 - Implementation

A Model for Program Development

■ Conclusion

- Process for creating, revising and maintaining an English program
- An overview of application in two institutions
- Next steps?

